THE REEF PROPERTIES

The immediate reaction from visitors entering a Reef Properties display home is that they would feel very comfortable living in the home as it is.

The Reef Properties bring a wealth of experience to their building projects and over the years they have learned to do things better and more efficiently.

The results can be seen in the finished project and the costs of building a new home.

According to the builders, Glenn and Peter McGrath, the popularity of the current display home means it will be duplicated several times.

“People love the layout and we’re about to build three or four of the same design,” they said.

“People usually make small changes to individualise their home, but sometimes they just want it exactly the same as the display – colours and all.

“I think if you walk into a home and love it straight away, you should build it – exactly how it is.”

Peter attributes much of the instant appeal to the female designer who supplies The Reef Properties with a range of family-friendly plans.

“Our designer has a real knack for making people feel at home and we get a lot of comments that our kitchens must be designed by a woman,” he said.
